

NEW DATES!

TOOTH ERUPTION: FROM NORMAL TO ABNORMAL FROM THEORY TO CLINICAL PRACTICE PART II

theoretical & practical lecture

6th and 7th of November 2026

Abstract

The course on teeth eruption patterns will cover normal and abnormal teeth eruption, clinical signs and differential diagnosis as well as possible treatment options throughout all dentition stages: from early mixed until permanent dentition.

We will cover all aspects of most prevalent canine impactions - both palatal and labial as well as not that frequent but important eruption disturbances of first permanent molar, incisors and bicuspid. All problem-solving clinical settings will be covered from wait and see to the exposure and forced eruption from Mini screws.

The course will be fully covered by clinical examples and real patients' stories. The course will be conducted in English.

Course Curriculum

- Labially impacted canines: diagnostic and treatment objectives. Clinical management.
- First permanent molars: ectopic eruption, impaction, primary eruption failure.
- Impacted premolars - can they really be called impacted?

Seeing is believing

ORTHOQ

'GC'

Dr. Rūta Almonaitienė

Dr. Rūta Almonaitienė graduated from the Vilnius University orthodontic program and received her MSc in orthodontics in 2005.

In 2014, she completed her PhD in Philosophy in Biomedical Sciences with a thesis titled "Permanent Teeth Emergence Time and Growth of the Face and Jaws of Lithuanian Children."

Dr. Almonaitienė has been actively involved in both private and public orthodontic practices (at the Zalgiris Clinic of Vilnius University) as well as academic work as an Assistant at Vilnius University since 2006.

She teaches both undergraduate students and postgraduate orthodontic residents at the Vilnius University Zalgiris Clinic.

Leading the department of orthodontics. Additionally, doctor has published articles on topics related to permanent teeth eruption, and her students consistently participate at national and international scientific conferences, presenting scientific reports on the subject.

Dr. Ruta Almonaitienė lectures at national and international dental conferences and her lectures are well accepted by the audience.

Hotel Mövenpick Tallinn, Estonia

6th and 7th of November 2026

NEW DATES!

Early bird: 350€ (until 31.08.26), Late bird: 450€

*For EST residents: 150€

*VAT will be added

Only 25 seats available — register early!

More Information and Registration: info@orthoq.ee or +372 5693 5646